Rojestvensky Not Justified.

In contradiction of the rumors that have been affoat for several days, the North Rojestvensky was not justified in firing upon the fishing fleet on the Dogger banks, there being no torpedo boats in their midst or in the neighborhood, while the fisher fleet itself committed no hostile act whatcommission's finding is unanimous, while expected, dissents from the other con-

It is noteworthy that the commission finds that Rojestvensky was justified in taking exceptional precautions and issuing the orders he did for the protection of his fleet and that he did not act in an inhumane manner by sailing away when the fisher boats had been struck, without rendering assistance. This is a salve to the Russian sentiments, perhaps required in order to secure the assent of the French and the Austrian commissioners to the main propositions of the report. And it is further interesting to note that the commission rebukes Rojestvensky mildly for not reporting the affair at the first port at which

This ends the incident. There may be discussion, and fault-finding on one side or the other, and perhaps Russian official objections will be noted. But the verdict is in and it must be accepted, just as England would have been compelled to accept it had it been against her claims. It is a righteous finding and the manner of its rendering greatly encourages all who hope to see the world eventually adopt this method of settling all disputes.

Governor Vardaman.

The name of Governor Vardaman of Mississippi is associated in the mind of the average man with much that is unpleasant, with a radical view on the negro question and with certain gross improprieties of speech regarding the President of the United States. But for all that, Governor Vardaman has on at least two occasions proved can be pitched in a high key of sincerity | French armies like rabbits in a drive. without in the least diminishing the regrets caused by his former conduct. In standing in his official capacity as an exponent of orderly processes of law, in the face of great public excitement in the very capital of the state. Governor Vardaman has read the whole south a wholesome lesson. He cannot be accused by his critics of being an admirer of the negro. He is no luke-warm partisan of the south and its peculiar institutions. But he draws the line at lynching. He insists upon giving to every man accused of crime a fair and decent trial in the established courts. Once before he has thus intervened between a mob and its victim. Yesterday he thwarted a mob by secretly sending the intended victim out of town, and then he personally pleaded with the people bent upon wreaking vengeance for an atrocious crime, promising them that the accused would be tried promptly. He went further, and offered a reward out of his own pocket for the detection and arrest of the real criminal if investigation should dispel the circumstantial evidence against the man already under arrest. A few more governors of the Vardaman stripe in such emergencies would quickly cure the south of its bad habit of ignoring the law processes whenever a negro offends. By his courageous and vigorous action in this case Governor Vardaman has gone measurably to-

American Civic Art.

Artistic civic development is no longer to be regarded as the dream of the enthusiast or the vagary of the crank. It is a recognized economic principle. Its business value is now understood, for commercial leaders are persuaded that the city that spends a million in esthetics, in the readjustment of tangles, in the correction of past mistakes reaps ten million in increased trade. Several American cities are now approaching the solution of their local problems in a spirit that promises results. Cleveland Ohlo, is considering plans that bear the impress of having been inspired by the grand project of the Senate's park commission for Washington. It is proposed there to acquire a large block of land in the heart of the business district and erect a series of public buildings facing a handsome boulevard or park and flanked by the great railroad terminal. Advocates of the project are educating the people of Cleveland to understand the scope and purpose and benefits of the improvement, and are even going of civic improvement. Not long ago one doing something of the kind for their city.

"The classic example of an artistic American city is, of course, Washington. This was a city made to order, with the advantage of a plan of development from the beginning, and succeeding generations had only to carry out the ideas of L'Enfant for this magnificent place. Most cities, however, are not so fortunate, and even Paris, the usual example of the city beau-tiful, had to be carved out into its present form by the ruthless destruction of existing structures under Baron Haussman, working under the authority of Napoleon III. Since the development of Washington, there has

It is gratifying to know that Springfield regards Washington as a classic model and as a "developed" city. But, unfortunately, this latter compliment is as yet undeserved. Washington has developed only to the extent that it requires final treatment to become the ideal capital. The Senate's the other Washington dailes. As a park plans are as yet unexecuted; in fact, they have not been authorized by Congress for execution. They have been placed on file. Yet there is no mistaking the benefit of their preparation. Already one excellent result is to be seen in the decision of the railroads entering Washington to join their terminals and erect a union station in keeping structurally and in harmony geographically with the plans of the commission, a whose instance, indeed, this costly enterprise was undertaken.

Every American citizen who feels that in civic development and artistic improvement lies the best line of national development should hold firmly to the view of the Spring sea arbitrators have decided that Admiral field Republican that Washington is a classic model, and should lend a hand at all times to realize the execution of the pending plans. For the sooner the capital of the country is in fact "developed" on these lines the sooner will other municipalities ever. In the last of these conclusions the follow suit. As long as this great project remains in a committee pigeon-hole, awaitthe Russian commissioner, as might be ing the quickening touch of legislation, the overcoming of the inertia of years of inattention to artistic details will be painfully slow. The development of Washington will the people of the country. The cost of the course of several years, at a rate which federal resources. There is every reason

Dr. Osler Oscillates.

The joke is on Dr. Osler. His critics have driven him to an explanation, and his explanation does not explain. His age limits do not limit. The record everywhere refutes his assertions. Intellectually, men do not begin to descend the hill at forty, nor are they at the bottom, fit to be turned in, at sixty. Turn anywhere you please and the theory is upset.

Beginning here at home, Franklin's pow ers showed their greatest brilliancy late in life, and he continued to grow to the very end. Hawthorne's exquisite genius made its greatest manifestations after he was forty, and at sixty he left an unfinished work which showed touches of much beauty. Webster's later orations were marvels of expression, while Lincoln's two inaugural addresses and the Gettysburg address proceeded from a man Dr. Osler would have consigned to the scrap heap.

Turning to England, and taking recent instances, look at Gladstone and Disraeli and Palmerston. What would that country's loss have been if they had been retired at forty and chloroformed at sixty? Look at Tennyson. Some of his finest work came late, and one of his most perfect gems at eighty. And Carlyle was hardly under way at forty.

The German empire is the work of three old men. William I, Bismarck and Von Moltke were old dodderers according to the Oslerian theory. They had no right to be alive. And yet they changed the map of the world. Bismarck flamed up as the himself an admirable state executive and a greatest German in three hundred years, defender of law and order. His latest dem- and Von Moltke, when near seventy, preonstration is of a kind to inspire praise that pared the plans which scooped in the

In France Thiers and Guizot wrough with their greatest effects late in life and Victor Hugo was still full armed when he died. President Loubet is the greatest individual force in France today, and he is away beyond Dr. Osler's dead line. Just across the border, in Spain, they are celebrating the three hundredth birthday of 'Don Quixote," and it so happens that Cervantes was past fifty when he gave the world that incomparable hero.

Dr. Osler, like all generalizers, overshoots the mark. There have been many grand young men, and mankind is deeply in debt to them, but there have been many more grand old men, and without their achievements it would be impossible today to say what the world would look like.

Mrs. Chadwick.

Mrs. Chadwick probably refused to tell her name for fear the next question might relate to her age. Lawyers are no respecters of persons, and when a witness is decile and obliging they press the examination to the limit. This gifted woman does not take the conventional view of things. As a financier she set all the laws of money aside and went her own engaging way. As a witness in court she likewise has her own methods of procedure, law or no law. Her later triumph, however, like ward rehabilitating himself in the eyes of the earlier, can be but temporary. The lawless witness will follow the lawless financier to exposure and defeat. Her name, her age, her schemes of graft will the Munroe doctrine in collecting debts will all be put upon the record, and Dr. Chadwick and the public be left to their sober

The Simplon Tunnel.

There was little doubt of the success of the undertaking to pierce the Simplon pass by means of a railroad tunnel twelve miles in length, despite the tremendous difficulties encountered. Modern engineers admit no impossibilities. The Alps had previously been bored and the question of feasibility had been settled. To burrow through the Simplon merely meant a longer task and a greater expenditure. There is no general agreement that aerial flight is necessary. It would be interesting and perhaps in some respects advantageous to travel through the air instead of on or under the earth or on the waters, but at present the gains are not likely to overcome the dangers. When the day comes that aerial navigation is required to overcome the surface congestion it is the sincere belief of many that it will be accomplished, and the experiments that have been in progress for many decades will contribute to ture of the bore and the emergence of heated water in places afforded scientists an opportunity to conduct interesting and perhaps valuable observations relative to the subterranean conditions. Now that a way has been found to bore horizontally under enormous masses of rock at a great depth from the average upper level, amid ordinarily terrifying conditions, it is possible that other great tunneling projects now checked by fear of failure, will be undertaken. The piercing of the Himalayas would seem to be an impossible conception, but if the changes now in progress in Asia continue for a few decades and yield the results now probable such a route between India and China may become necessary. A travel line of this kind might prove to be one of the most potent forces for the regeneration of eastern and central Asia.

The Baltimore physician who says a man is no good at forty and should be chloroformed at sixty gives no real reason, assuming that he is correct, for deferring the anesthesia so long.

Socialism. Fr m the Chicago Chronicle.

Proponents of state socialism are fond of putting their case in this way: Society has tried many forms of government, from the patriarchal to the republican; none of these experiments has given satisfaction. Why not try socialism? Why not test a theory which is gaining adherents in increasing numbers every day? The inference is that no existing form of government is endurable and that socialism offers the only relief. But does it? The world has run along fairly well for some thousands of years under various forms of govsands of years under various forms of gov-ernment. There have been despotisms and oligarchies, monarchies, absolute and lim-ded; republics and hybrid organizations combining several systems of government. Some have been better than others—the socialist would say worse than others—but under all forms of government the ten-dency of the race has been steadily toward dency of the race has been steadily toward enlightenment and progress. That cannot truthfully be disputed. It is a reasonable deduction that there is in every form of government more or less good. Try ONE CASE and you will get better and more lasting results than you ever had before in your life. Follow directions for a Permanent Cure. As a blood purifier it has no equal. -AT ALL DRUGGISTS' .-WASHINGTON LETTERS:

WASHINGTON LETTERS:

HEADACHES AND GOUT.—I have recently used Veronica Water for Headaches and Gout, and by its use I have been cured. Very respectfully. Mme. PAYN, 703 15th st. n.w., Washington, D. C. INDIGESTION AND CONVULSIONS.—My son was troubled with holigestion that would throw him into convulsions which would last from three to twelve hours at a time. I hardly think the benefits of Veronica Water can be overestimated. I think it saved his life; I certainly give it the credit of 50 doing. Very truly, C. W. DeMAINE. Jr., Paints, Oils and Glass, 3207 M st. n.w., Washington, D. C.

KIDNEY, PAIN IN BACK AND HEAD.—For these troubles, which I have had for years, my honest opinion of Veronica Water is expressed in the following sentence: "It is all that it is represented to be, and I do not think its equal was ever put in bottles. Respectfully, JAS. S. KELI-HER, Foreman No. 14 Engine Co., Fire Dept., Washington, D. C.

ECZEMA AND CONSTIPATION.—I have suffered with these troubles for some time and I can say under oath that Veronica Water has done more for me than all other treatments and remedies combined. Respectfully, JNO. HART, 3d Precinct Police, Washington, D. C.
